GOOD-FRIDAY. A POEM.

Quarto. Price 1s.

THIS little piece is the production of a clergyman lately deceaſed, and was by him intended for the preſs. The editor modeſtly expreſſes his hopes, that it will not be an unacceptable or an unuſeful preſent, not only on account of the importance of the ſubject, but alſo as at this particular ſeaſon of general reflection, trifles give place to "the things which belong to our peace."---The following paſſages are ſelected from this poem:

WHO on mount Calvary do I ſee?
What ſhouts! what mock'ries do I hear?
My God!---my Saviour!---can it be---
For thee---yon croſs---do they prepare?
His nerves the nails deep piercing rack!
Wounded---the burſting ſinews crack!
He groans---he ſinks---he faints--- he bows---he dies!
Earth ſhakes---rocks rend---graves ope---the dead ariſe!

Convulſive nature breaks her laws,
And ſympathizes with her God!
The mid-day ſun his rays withdrays;
The orb of night is clad in blood;
With glitt'ring arms the ſkies reſound,
And fiery meteors flaſh around;
Omens terrific of impending woes
Ere, Lord! thy great tremendous day aroſe.

Now, ſatan, bruiſed is thy head:
O hell!---thy gates no more prevail:
Sin, tyrant ſin, is captive led:
Oh death!---oh grave!---your vict'ries fail!
What arms!---what hoſt did aid the Lord?
Meekneſs alone, his ſhield his ſword:
The Victor aſk'd not of his potent Sire,
Legions of angels, or Elias' fire.

Lord! what is man?---oh! Son divine,
Couldſt thou vouchſafe for him to die?
And could our God his Son reſign?
Oh!---ineffable myſtery!
Beyond th' extent of angels ken;
Beyond the hope or thought of men!
What mind can fathom, or what reaſon prove,
The height and depth of this unbounded love!

Ye proud, who from the patriarch claim,
And vainly boaſt your pedigree!---
What faith---what works deſerve that name?
How that alliance do you ſee?
And why are two Meſſiahs made?
Unleſs conviction to evade:
You think that your's triumphant will appear?
Deluſive thought---his kingdom is not here!

His conqueſt then the only ſign
The true Meſſiah to declare?
Are wonders wrought by pow'r divine
Proofs weaker than the pomp of war?
Let truth's bright ray upon you riſe,
And ſweep the ſcales from off your eyes;
Unbiaſs'd ſearch your own prophetic page;
There trace Meſſiah down from age to age.

Whate'er was writ in Moſes' law,
In figures---types---alluſions veil'd;
What David and the prophets ſaw
Concerning him are all fulfill'd:
Yet ſtill obdurate will ye prove?
Your rocky hearts will nothing move?
Perverſe in wilful darkneſs will ye ſtray,
Nor, Abra'am like, rejoice to ſee Chriſt's day?

Behold the God of nations riſe!---
Ye Gentiles, hail this glorious ſight!
Ye proſtrate kings, turn here your eyes!
Ye diſtant worlds, adore this light!
Be faith the homage which ye bring:
Be faith the incenſe to your King:
Well known his name; his mighty name ſhall run
Th' expanded circle of the ambient ſun.

Ye grafted olives, be not vain!
See Iſrael's fate, and humbly fear:
The caſt-off branch ſhall ſhoot again;
Whilſt---wild---yourſelves no fruit could bear:
Enliv'ning grace bedew'd your hearts;
The Hebrew race that ſtock imparts
Until the Gentiles fulneſs---though enſlav'd,
Yet 'tis decreed,---"all Iſrael ſhall be ſav'd."

Ye bleſt! who bear that honour'd name
On you at Antioch firſt beſtow'd,
Take up the croſs, nor think it ſhame
And follow, uncompell'd, your God.
Behold, the radiant bands appear!
Faith,---hope,---and charity draw near;
To Chriſt, unerring guides direct the way
Through life's dark maze, to heav'n's eternal day.

What ſhall our love to Chriſt divide?
What rivals in our hearts ſhall riſe?
Not all this world's vain tranſient pride,
Nor all its ſharpeſt miſeries:
Whatever in our cup may flow,
Whatever colour life may know,
Safe in his love, by his example taught,
Reſign'd we'll joyful drink the various draught.

Man---grateful man!---adore and praiſe
The wiſdom---goodneſs---pow'r---divine;
Thoſe attributes thy God diſplays;
All theſe in thy redemption join:
Before this world its courſe began,
Was form'd the all-redeeming plan:
Nor ſhall its ſaving influence expire
'Till through creation blaze the general fire.

When the laſt trumpet's rending ſound
Shall wake all nations to the bar,
What guilty horrors will ſurround
The wilful---harden'd---blaſphemer!
Fool! dar'ſt thou, ridicule that ſin,
Which ne'er to man ſhall be forgiv'n?
Dar'ſt thou Chriſt's perſon---doctrine---here deride?
By Chriſt, before all heav'n, thou'lt be deny'd.

Creator kind!---at nature's birth,
Thou mad'ſt all nations of one blood,
And gave to man thy new form'd earth,
With various climes for his abode!
If Jew---Turk---Heretic have ſtray'd,
By error or by ſin betray'd;
If the blind paths of ignorance men have trod;
Ev'n if the fool hath ſaid, there is no God;

Yet ſtill let thy implanted grace
Illuminate---ſoften---ev'ry heart.
In wrath, oh God!---wilt thou deface
Thy image, his far better part?
Thy handy-works wilt thou deſpiſe?
Againſt thy will, a ſinner dies!
When thou, dread Judge!---all glorious ſhalt appear,
Look on thy croſs---and man in mercy ſpare!

LONDON, APRIL 9.

PRIVATE letters from Holland adviſe, that a foreigner, ſuppoſed to be of rank, was lately ſeized at Amſterdam by order of the ſtates. Among his papers which were likewiſe ſeized and tranſmitted to the Hague, it is ſaid ſome memorials were found of the greateſt conſequence to the peace of Europe.

A letter from Staffordſhire mentions, that by an account lately delivered in, at a General Aſſembly of the Proprietors of the inland navigation from the Trent to the Merſey, it appears that 66 miles of this navigation are now entirely finiſhed; that the canal from the river Trent, near Wilden-Ferry, in Derbyſhire, to Stock upon Trent, in Staffordſhire, being in length 56 miles, hath for ſome time been navigable; and that many veſſels have accordingly been employed thereupon. It appeared alſo, from the eſtimates, &c. that 40 locks, 114 cart-bridges, nine foot-bridges, and 120 culverts, or aqueducts, including thoſe over the rivers Dove and Trent, were completed. Alſo that 2151 yards of the ſubterraneous paſſage at Harecaſtle (the whole being 2500) and 770 of that at Preſton on the Hill, were completed.

APRIL 10. On Thurſday evening a Meſſenger was ſent away with ſome diſpatches to the Lords Regents of Hanover.

On Thurſday after breaking up of a Board of Admiralty, ſome freſh inſtructions were ſent to the Commiſſioners of Plymouth, Portſmouth, Chatham, and Sheerneſs.

Some letters from Riga mention, that there are now in the harbour twelve ſail of the line, &c. ready to put to ſea on the ſhorteſt notice.

They write from Warſaw, that a great ſcarcity of proviſions prevail in that city, and the contiguous country, owing to the number of foreign troops quartered there.

Advices from Venice mention, that ſome Ruſſian ſhips of force are now in the Adriatic, which much alarms the Republic.

It is ſaid that yeſterday ſome diſpatches of the greateſt importance arrived at St. James's from the court of Berlin.

APRIL 12. The Miniſtry, irritated even to madneſs that their ſhameful alliance with France againſt Pruſſia ſhould be made public, have inſtructed their hirelings to vent a torrent of abuſe againſt COUNT MALTZAN, the Pruſſian envoy at this court. In obedience to ſuch miniſterial mandates, a ſtring of paragraphs, fabricated for the purpoſe of detraction, appeared in two morning papers of Saturday. To the virtuous ſet of TORIES at the helm it is not enough to intrigue with France; not enough to barter away the welfare of England, by forming an alliance with the moſt perfidious nation that ever diſgraced the annals of hiſtory; it is not enough for our tools in office to become fit inſtruments for their country's deſtruction in the hands of the GRAND MONARQUE; but they muſt endeavour to diſgrace the Pruſſian ambaſſador, whoſe maſter as a man poſſeſſes tranſcendent abilities, and as a King reflects luſtre on a throne. What meanneſs of ſoul! What degeneracy of principle doth ſuch a conduct betray! PRINCIPLE! Pardon the expreſſion, we are talking of the TORY Miniſters of George the Third; we are talking of an abandoned crew of POLITICAL ASSASSINS, who aim a dagger at the heart of their country, and now implore the aid of FRANCE to guide the fatal ſteel, that thus, when they have deſtroyed the liberties of Britain, like blood-hounds o'er a mangled careaſe, they may KEEP CAROUSALS, and with a ſavage guſto LICK THE PURPLED GORE that ſtreams from the wounds they have made in the conſtitution of their country.

A correſpondent informs us, that all the late paragraphs in the different prints concerning the departure of the Pruſſian Ambaſſador, and an alliance with France and Spain, have been fabricated by an infamous knot of miſcreants in the Alley, in order to fall the ſtocks. Every point in diſpute between England and Pruſſia is adjuſted to the ſatisfaction of each; and ſhould a war take place between the different continental powers, ſuch a plan is adopted as will enable Great-Britain to obſerve the ſtricteſt neutrality.

Sir Charles Townley, Knt. Clarencieux, is appointed Garter, Principal King at Arms, in the room of Stephen Martin Leake, Eſq; deceaſed.

By authentic accounts from Bourdeaux, we learn, that the French have been ſo attentive to improvements in agriculture, that they have incloſed and cultivated all the waſte grounds in that diviſion within theſe four years paſt, which amount to 360,000 arpens, equal to 400,000 Engliſh acres; theſe waſtes, which were before entirely barren, have produced annually near 900,000 quarters of grain, ſufficient to maintain 700,000 perſons with bread for one year, wiſely ſupporting that political axiom, "That the means of ſubſiſtence being augmented, population increaſes of courſe."

Extract of a letter from Dantzick, April 1.

"The Pruſſian ſoldiers, who are quartered in this city, and its environs, are become extremely burthenſome to the inhabitants, as their numbers encreaſe daily, and their inſolent behaviour heightens the evil greatly; complaints are preferred to his Pruſſian Majeſty, but no anſwer has as yet been obtained; yet it is hoped that he will relieve the inhabitants from military oppreſſion; though a report is current, that he means to ſend us a Governor in a very ſhort time."

The laſt advices brought by the Nottingham from Bengal and the coaſt of Coromandel, give the moſt favourable accounts of the ſituation of affairs there. Both the coaſts enjoyed a profound peace, the revenues have been duly collected, and large inveſtments were ready for all the homeward-bound ſhips. To the honour of the preſent chairman, the private letters were delivered, as ſoon as they could be forted; a thing never known to happen whilſt the late diſcorded junto were in power.

APRIL 13. Letters from Stockholm adviſe, that the Empreſs of Ruſſia had by letter requeſted from the King of Sweden to be informed what part his Majeſty would chooſe to take in the preſent ſituation of affairs, and that his Majeſty had returned for anſwer, that he ſhould obſerve an exact neutrality.

Three ſhips of war, well ſtored and manned at the expence of government, will ſail in a few days for the North Pole, in order to make freſh diſcoveries; a very ſkilful and active commander will ſail in one of them in the character of Commodore.

An anonymous correſpondent informs us, that laſt Saturday two Eaſt-India Directors ſet out for France, in order to receive the ſum of 233,000l. due to the Eaſt-India Company for the maintenance of the French priſoners of war in the Eaſt-Indies; and as a further conſolation in the preſent ſcarcity of money, we hear that previous to the concluſion of the triple alliance between England, France and Spain, our Miniſtry inſiſt on the diſcharge of the Manilla ranſom, and on the reſtitution-money of the Antigallican privateer, which of courſe muſt augment the circulation of ſpecie in this country to a million and half ſterling.

Several very vague accounts having appeared in the public prints relative to the Pruſſian Ambaſſador, the following only, we are aſſured, is a fact, that a new Ambaſſador is daily expected here from Berlin, and that the Count Malzhan will then ſet out as envoy to Paris.

WARSAW, March 20. Thoſe who ſeem moſt likely to know what paſſes at Buchareſt, are of opinion, that the negociations will be ineffectually broken up. It is currently reported here, that the Field Marſhal Count Romanzow has received orders to commence hoſtilities with the ſecond army as ſoon as the congreſs is diſſolved. That army is much reduced by ſickneſs, and by being obliged to ſend ſeveral detachments into Ruſſia.

All the advices from Ruſſia confirm, that the Empreſs has ordered both her land and ſea forces to be put on a formidable footing. Every fiftieth man, of thoſe able to carry arms, is inliſted, which makes an augmentation of 60,000 men. Forty ſhips of the line are arming, and will be ready to ſail about the latter end of April. The ſame advices add, that the grand army will be reinforced with 24 regiments, the ſecond with 16, and that which General Elmpt commands in Finland with 12 regiments.

The Ruſſian General Count Tottleben died here this morning, after a ſhort illneſs.

March 23. We ſee not the leaſt preparation making as yet for the Dyet, which ſhould open on the 8th of next month. Several members, who arrived here three months ago, in order to attend the Dyet, left this city, and went off privately. Our politicians differ in their opinions, ſeeing the King neglects to ſummon the Dyet; notwithſtanding the ſerious declarations and ſevere menaces of the three united powers, gives reaſon to believe that the three united powers are juſt about forming an agreement with our King, which is the very reaſon that ſeveral members have privately left this city for fear. If the King and our miniſtry ſhould join together, all hopes of recovering our independency are loſt. Two corroborant circumſtances lead us to this opinion: One is, that the city and caſtle of Cracow, which is one of the beſt fortreſſes in Poland, after the Auſtrians took it into their poſſeſſion, we thought entirely loſt: But orders have come from the court of Vienna, that the Auſtrians ſhould quit it, and deliver it to the troops of our crown. The ſecond ſuſpicious circumſtance is, that Kaminieck, a fortreſs which is unconquerable, was poſſeſſed all the time by the Confederates; but, four months ago it was delivered to the Ruſſians by a ſtratagem of General Stackelberg, and we are juſt now informed, is to be delivered again to us, as is likewiſe Chanſtochaw, from whence ſeveral judge, that a private treaty has of late taken place between our King and the three united powers. Others again are of opinion, that theſe united powers are ſenſible of the ſtrong aſſurance which our King has of the warmeſt aſſiſtance from other powerful princes, ſo that the above fortreſſes have been reſtored for fear of worſe conſequences. Nay, ſome do aſſert, that our King has addreſſed himſelf to the Porte, from whence he received the beſt promiſes; and it is reported here, that our miniſtry have declared, that they expect a Courier from Conſtantinople the latter end of this month, and they will reſolve upon nothing till that Courier arrive.

They write from Thorne, that the Pruſſian Commiſſioners have numbered and taxed all the inhabitants of that city and its environs, which have been regiſtered and printed, after which orders were given, that every one do buy the ſaid regiſter, the price of which is a Poliſh florin, (ſixpence); and that every ſhip is obliged to take a certain quantity of ſalt, ſufficient for a voyage of twelve months, from his Pruſſian Majeſty's ſalt works there; ſo that, if the ſalt works ſhould be deſtroyed, by what accident ſoever, before every one has taken his portion, he would be obliged to pay for it; therefore, as a ſecurity, every one ſhall take his ſalt as ſoon as poſſible, from whence we conjecture, that they expect to be obliged to fight for their poſſeſſion in Poland.

March 24. Thirty-two of the accomplices in the attempt againſt the life of the King, on the 3d of November 1771, are ſummoned to appear at the tribunal of the Dyet within the term of ſix weeks and three days.

The laſt letters from the frontiers of Turky adviſe, that the Turks have, during the armiſtice, conſiderably augmented their forces both by land and ſea, and have learned their troops a new exerciſe, which they have been reconciled to by a certain foreign power, notwithſtanding their ancient prejudices. Thoſe letters further add, that the Ottoman army ſeems to be in a very good condition to begin the campaign, and promiſe themſelves ſome ſignaliſing victories, if circumſtances require their entering the field again. The courier, which is expected to arrive here the 27th inſtant from Bucharaſt, is to be the meſſenger of war or peace being concluded upon between the belligerent powers.

From the GENERAL EVENING-POST, of July 25, 1771.

To the Editor of the GENERAL EVENING-POST.

IN your inſtructive paper of the 13th current, you have favoured us with an extract from the Edinburgh new Eſſays in praiſe of Tanſy for Gouty Conſtitutions. What I have to offer on this ſubject, I am perſuaded, from your readineſs to oblige, I need not requeſt you to communicate to the public, for the benefit of thoſe who are afflicted with that dreadful malady. It is not agreeable to me to affix my name to this; but that my gouty brethren may pay ſome regard to it for their own ſakes, I empower you to make me privately known to all thoſe who may be diſpoſed to enquire, that if they ſhould be deſirous of further information, they may be able to apply to me, and their letters (poſt free) ſhall be chearfully anſwered.

In February 1765 an infuſion of tanſy was ſtrongly recommended to me by a Scotch gentleman, of whom I had an opinion, to be drank twice a day, that is, between breakfaſt and dinner, and between that time and ſupper; half a pint at each draught, to be taken luke-warm. For ſeveral weeks I followed his advice, but finding it palled my appetite to dinner, and interfered with tea-drinking in the afternoon, I reſolved to take it only once a-day, and that upon an empty ſtomach in the morning, two hours before breakfaſt: I would have repeated it again at bed-time, but, being a ſupper-man, reſolved to make my medicine ſubſervient to my regular family-way of living. At that time I was uſually confined with the gout twice or three times in a year, from four to eight or nine weeks together; ſo that in my intervals I was feeble, relaxed, and more ſuſceptible of cold, which, when acquired, never failed to lay me up. I have perſevered in taking that medicine from that period to this inſtant; and ſhall (God willing) continue it whilſt I live. It was a long time before I received any benefit from it, though for a few months it ſeemed to act as a laxative, but more powerfully as a diuretic, which I think it ſtill continues to do. For four years paſt I have had, at moſt, only one fit in a year, and ſometimes not that: I think the paroxyſms are ſhorter, though not leſs violent than uſual; and in all other reſpects I enjoy perfect health and good ſpirits.

I gather my tanſy in Auguſt, at which time it is in flower; ſtrip off the leaves, cut off the flowers (with an inch or two of the ſtem) and ſhake them out together, as other herbs, in a room to dry; then put it into a hamper for uſe: A good handful of thoſe leaves and flowers put into a tin coffee-pot, about ten o'clock every morning, filled up with boiling water, and ſet aſide to be taken next morning about ſix o'clock, to the quantity of half a pint after it is firſt made warm over a fire. This infuſion ſhould nearly reſemble good coffee in ſtrength and colour. I live as other reaſonable people do, eating heartily, and abſtaining only from made-diſhes or high ſauces. I am, in all reſpects, a temperate man; my beverage at meals is ſmall beer; afterwards I either take a pint of freſh home-brew'd ale, or a few glaſſes of weak rum-toddy, and ſometimes a glaſs or two of what is ſold for Spaniſh wine, red or white; however, of wines I am very ſparing, well knowing that in this degenerate age there is little or no genuine Port to be got, our wine-coopers or merchants being all turned brewers; but bottled liquors in general are flatulent, conſequently unfit for gouty conſtitutions. When I grow ſick or tired of my medicine, I leave it off for two or three weeks, and then return to it; I don't uſually take it when in the gout, and for this reaſon, I ſeldom get to ſleep until towards morning; at which time, after a heavy, tedious, irkſome night of pain, a little reſt is more requiſite and beneficial than my doſe. I never bathe or waſh my feet, except when cleanlineſs tells me it is neceſſary, becauſe I am of opinion it emaciates and makes the limbs tender; but when my feet are hot and uncomfortable I wipe them with a wet cloth; and I always wear cork-ſoled ſhoes (of which I have different ſizes) and warm woollen ſocks. It is by all means proper to inform you, that my conſtitution having undergone a violent ſhock in the year 1762, from a gouty diſorder in my ſtomach and bowels, I have ever ſince been under the neceſſity of taking one, one and a half, or two pills every night at bed-time. The recipe I had from an eminent phyſician at Bath, who ordered three for a doſe; but, as he afterwards told me, "judge for yourſelf, and take as you require, more or leſs." Theſe pills are exceedingly innocent and gentle; and as my gouty brethren ſhould always keep their bodies cool and open, I hereto annex a copy of my recipe, from which, together with the tanſy, I am perſuaded they will find benefit, if they will perſevere as I have done; who am, Sir, Your's, &c.

BENEVOLUS.

Take of Venice ſoap, } of each half a drachm;
Rufus's pill, }

And, with the a ſufficient quantity of elixir of aloes, make the whole into twelve pills.
